COST Training School: Researching Social Media

Location	University of Udine, Italy
Date	31 March - 02 April 2009

COST Training Schools disseminated the outcomes of activities which were part of COST Actions or provided intensive training on a new emerging subject. They were open to early-stage and senior researchers alike. As part of the Outreach Strategy, fifteen training schools took place between March and May 2009, on a variety of topics.

This training school helped guide doctoral students and provided them with the theoretical framework and the suitable methodologies to investigate new fields of research in social media.

In the long-term, it will help them to successfully carry out research on social networks and give them the opportunity to achieve a good theoretical background and literature review, enabling them to place their research questions in the right perspective.

Another goal was to provide a methodological tool (SIMIAN) which adds the power of statistics to the deepness of the qualitative research. The method was explained by its inventors.
